Taking the challenge out of change

CHA<lle>NGE

Dear Principal/Teacher/Member of Educational Staff:

We'd like to introduce you to the new series of anti-bullying curricula entitled "No Such Thing as a Bully." It's designed to help our schools in several ways:

- It removes the labels of bully and victim, enabling us to focus on identifying bully actions and victim responses.
- It provides a new definition that breaks bullying down and allows us to deal with bullying situations in a more measurable way.
- It empowers kids with the tools and thought patterns that enable them to cope with bullying situations.
- It enables teachers, school staff and parents to recognize potential bullying situations before anyone is hurt, and deal with those situations proactively.

In short, everyone comes out a winner.

The program is designed for three different levels - elementary, middle, and high school. Each comes complete with age-appropriate skill-building exercises and assignments. There is also a No Such Thing as a Bully guide specifically for parents to work with their own children. The best solution is a joint effort!

As a parent, I'd like you to explore these tools. There is a description of the program, and some of the tools at <http://bullyoutreachproject.com>. The creators of the program, Kelly Karius and Ron Graham, welcome calls with any questions or exploration of how to use the material. Their contact information is below.

Sincerely,
